

Open Vacancy on Cape Fear Center for Inquiry Board of Directors

The Cape Fear Center For Inquiry (CFCI) is currently looking for a community member to fill a vacancy on their board of directors. CFCI is a public charter school located in Wilmington, NC. As a charter school we are funded by the state of North Carolina and do not charge tuition. We are not a part of New Hanover County School System, but rather function as our own small school system. The board of directors makes policy and hiring decisions.

The position on the board is one of active commitment working towards creating a school focused on inquiry-based teaching. CFCI's primary objective is teaching students to have more ownership of learning. The board of directors is looking for a community member who is energetic, focused and excited about the welfare of the children at this public charter school.

If you are interested in applying for becoming a member of the Cape Fear Center for Inquiry Board of Directors please go to <http://www.cfc.net> for an application.
